Claims examples:

- A general contractor subcontracts design of HVAC to a mechanical engineer. The engineer makes a mistake in his calculations, which results in inadequate cooling of an office building in summer months. The building owner demands a $75,000 upgrade from the general contractor. The engineer has gone out of business and he no longer carries Professional Liability insurance. The general contractor is held liable for the design error and his GL policy will not cover it.

- A contractor estimates the cost of a new package distribution center to be $1MM. When the project is 90% completed, the owner discovers that the project does not meet specifications. Areas of the floor where heavy equipment is to be placed are not properly reinforced, and retrofitting is required. The new cost of the project is $2MM and the contractor is held liable for the difference due to mis-design of the floor slab.

Premiums start at $7,500 with limits of $1 Mil. / $1 Mil.
